The Fire Alarm

The fire alarm on Friday night last seems to have caused a great diversion of opinion. While some people seem to think that it was unnecessary, others think that it was just the thing to awaken the people to their responsibility, in seeing that we had a trained brigade.

Both sides can put forward some very convincing arguments, but this is the point. Is a trained brigade—which we hope will be the outcome of the alarm—worth the inconvenience to which the general public were put. To be rudely awakened by a loud clanging of bells, and loud cries of fire is not pleasant we all admit. But to have to retire with the thought that if a fire broke out there is no organization to combat with the flames, might be more unpleasant still.

It is true that the scene of the fire was away back of town, and many a tumble was caused by running there. But it is equally true, that it was necessary to have it where there was not the slightest danger to property.

All things considered, the engines were got to the fire in good time. The time of night and the distance to be covered in darkness, over very rough ground was against a record time being made. As it was, 10 minutes from the first alarm to the time of the engine being there, was all that had elapsed.

Town Council

The regular fortnightly meeting of the Town Council was held on Monday night last when there were present, Mayor Corbett, Councillors Hembling, Liesemer, Hunsberger, Good, and Moyer.

The first item of business was the considering of a request to lower the side walk on the south side of Osler street west of the Alexandra Livery Stable. After due consideration it was thought advisable to allow it to remain as it was for the time being as improvements were more urgently needed in other parts of the town.

Bills amounting to $46.95 were ordered paid.

Bylaw No. 66, was read a first second and third time.

This finished the business and the Council accordingly adjourned.

For Campers—Don'ts that may save many thousand dollars

1. Don't, when in the woods throw down a lighted match, cigar stub or other flaming object; make sure that the flame has been thoroughly extinguished before throwing it away.
2. Don't build your camp fire larger than is necessary.
3. Don't, under any circumstances, leave your fire unattended, even for a comparatively short time; see that it is dead out before you go away.
4. Don't build your fire in leaves, rotten wood or other inflammable material.
5. Don't build your fire against a large or hollow log, where it is hard to be sure when it has been entirely put out.

To these "don'ts" it may be added that in windy weather or in a dangerous place, it is well to confine the fire in a hole dug clean down to the mineral soil. A fire may smoulder in the humus, or "duff" for days, only waiting for a strong breeze to fan it into a flame that may burn over miles of timber.

Summer tourists and campers unfortunately have a bad reputation among owners of timber as being often a cause of fires. Such fires could be prevented, almost without exception, by a little extra care on the part of the campers, who have been the cause of much forest destruction, and who have just as real an interest in the preservation of the forests as the owners of the timber themselves. The rules given above are the result of long experience and observation on the part of many woodsmen and lumbermen as to the origin of fires from this cause, and are earnestly commended to the attention of campers, sportsmen and others.

Fire In Crossfield

A fire of considerable strength broke out on Sunday evening in the ice house belonging to the proprietors of the restaurant. The building, which stood at the back of the lot next to the butcher shop, had a large quantity of ice covered with hay in it. When discovered the fire had made considerable headway and the interior of the building was a mass of flames. It being clearly impossible to save the ice house, attention was given to the adjoining buildings and a large number of willing hands got to work to prevent the spread of the fire. Fortunately there was no wind at the time and this circumstance undoubtedly saved a good part of the town from being destroyed, as there were several small buildings close at hand and also a large quantity of lumber for the new bank which would soon have been in flames had the wind been blowing. Later on it was found possible to get the walls of the building pulled over when enabled the burning hay to be reached and gradually extinguished. The loss was about $15,000 and the cause of the fire is unknown.

The Blindman River Electric Light and Power Co. shut their plant down on last Saturday and Lacombe is now without electric lights, a condition which seems likely to continue for a year at least. The washing out of the dam at the power station was the immediate cause of the shut-down, but owing to the unsettled relations between the Power Company and the Town Council, it looks improbable that the Company will again start up. "What?" queried Mrs. Bennett, started at the despair in his voice. "Do you mean it is an actual case? Some friend of yours, perhaps?" Bennett nodded.

"Oh, the poor, poor fellow!" she sympathized. "What a terrible position for him! It was he, perhaps, that I heard talking to you here just now. No wonder he seemed excited! The sins of the fathers shall be visited upon the children even unto the third."

"It is something less hard on the children than on the wives," mused Bennett, half to herself.

"The wives! Your friend has a mother living? That makes it doubly hard. Oh, my son, every day I thank God in all humility that my husband lived so blameless a life and left no honored a name! How grateful you and I both ought to be for—"

"It is easy enough to decide for some one you have never seen," retorted Bennett almost rudely. "But suppose the dishonest man in my story had been father and—"

"I refuse to suppose anything of the sort!" interrupted his mother indignantly, rising to her feet. "I wonder that you can speak so! How can you suggest so horrible a thing?"

"Just a thoughtless, careless speech of mine. That's all I said. Alwyn's very late. You'll have a headache, I'm afraid. Won't you go to bed?"

"Yes, it is late, and I'm keeping you up. Good night, dear. I wish your friend—"

She checked herself suddenly, with a little gasp. Bennett, glancing up to Cynthia Garrison, her, saw that her eyes were riveted on a bit of pasteboard lying on the corner of his desk directly beneath the reading lamp.

It was Horrikan's card.

Bloody the mother's gaze shifted from the card to her son. From her face the cloud had been cleared by a more swift emotion that left it very old, pale and sunken.

"Mr. Horrikan," she murmured, "it was he who was your visitor tonight? Surely he isn't the sort of a man to cure about his father's reputation for honesty. He?"

"You're tired, mother," interrupted Bennett in haste. "Won't you?"

"Wait!" she panted. "He visit here—Alwyn?"

Her voice rising to a wail of pain-stricken appeal. "Did—did that man dare to hint against your father? Tell me the truth! I have a right to know. Did he?"

Alwyn bowed his head in silence. "Will you wait a moment?"

"He said," muttered Bennett, almost incoherently, "he said my father made his fortune—by graft!"

"And you threatened him and threw him out of the house?" she cried, her old eyes ablaze.

"No."

"At any?"

"He—he proved what he said!"

"It is a lie! A wicked, abominable lie!"

"It is the truth, mother. Would I have told you such a thing—would Horrikan have left this room alive if it were not true?"

A silence—dreadful in its intensity—fell over the room. Alwyn dared not look at his mother. At last she spoke: "I must know more. I refuse to believe one word. You spoke of proofs. What are they?"

Without a word, Bennett handed her the report left by Horrikan. For a time she looked over the story, broken only by the occasional turning of a page of the report. Then, after what seemed to Alwyn an eternity of waiting, the document was laid on the floor.

Bennett glanced at his mother. She was standing rigid, her face cold and hard as granite. "Alwyn," she said, "I have ferreted this out," she said, "as it darning to draw a near or proffer comfort to the woman whom the boss's disclosure had turned to stone. He has a story to tell."

"I do not advise, I command, Horrikan!"

profs and says he will publish them broadcast unless I withdraw my opposition in the Borough franchise matter. If I let that bill pass, Friday he will turn the report, and—

"There is only one thing to do," interposed the mother, speaking with slow deliberation, her voice cold and colorless as her face. "I might as well prevail, no matter what."

"Mother's voice! Alwyn, trembling. "You advise me—You advise me—" "I do not advise, I command. Do right!"

CHAPTER XIII.
THE momentous Friday had arrived; the day whereon the fate of the borough franchise bill, the Street railway bill in its amended form was to come up for the afternoon's consideration.

Every paper in the city devoted columns to the situation. Everywhere it was known that the "boy mayor" was fighting with all his might the bill he had already vetoed. Equally well was it understood that Horrikan was making the battle of his whole career to induce his "solid thirteenth" aldermen to stand firm and could maintain his hold on Roberts for the fourteenth, all he would be plain sailing and the bill would pass by a two-thirds vote in spite of the mayor's veto.

More than the mere bill and his price for it were included in Horrikan's reasons for his present activity. He recognized that his prestige as boss was at stake—that in case of failure his hold on the organization would be considerably weakened, if not lost.

He was not alone in this. Most of his solid thirteenth were to fulfill his once-again threat to tear him down from his eminence. For the whole organization was viewing with breathless interest the duel between Horrikan and the youthful Mayor, the boss had "made." In such circles a beaten man commands scant respect.

The board of aldermen were in session in the city hall. Off the ante-chamber of the great room where they met was a small, snugly furnished apartment, first of a series of similar rooms that stretched away, with connecting doors, to the far end of the main corridor. This place, with the room adjoining, had been the comptroller's office. Of late, however, that official had changed his quarters and the room nearest the ante-chamber had been appropriated by Horrikan himself as a sort of unofficial surgery, where he could sit at ease and transact business at close quarters whenever the organization's secret interests demanded his presence at the city hall.

Here, his whereabouts known only to a few intimates and personal lieutenants, the boss was wont to sit at ease, like some fat, rubicund spider in the center of a web of intrigue, and issue his orders or plans of campaign. Some of these were carried by word of mouth through the ante-room into the aldermen's chamber. Others he transmitted by means of a telephone that stood ready on the center table, before which his great easy chair was always placed.

At present the room was empty, the aldermen were about to convene on the fatal Friday of the Borough bill's final consideration sat three men—Wainwright, Gibbs and Horrikan. The former, in spite of his habitual staidness, was plainly uneasy. Gibbs made no effort to deny his anxiety. His eyes were bloodshot, his manner abstracted and his nerves evidently strung to breaking point. Horrikan, on the other hand, sat cool and collected, his face as calm as the sea.

"What will our bill come up to, do you suppose?" asked Gibbs, breaking a brief silence.

"In half an hour or so probably," answered Horrikan, glancing at his watch. "I thought it was better for us to get here ahead of time."

"Half an hour," fumed Gibbs, "and neither Ellis nor Roberts here yet. Suppose they don't get here on time?"

"They will," granted Horrikan placidly.

"Do you think it is possible either of them has come yet?" went on Gibbs, with a glance at the ante-chamber door.

"No."

"How do you know? Perhaps—"

"Williams would have told me. He knows where I'm to be found."

"You're sure Ellis and Roberts will show up?"

"Yes."

"In good time?"

"But suppose they don't?" insisted Gibbs nervously. "What then?"

"Why, if they don't then they won't. What do you suppose?" snapped Horrikan. "What's the matter with you, anyhow? Are you looking for a museum case for the 'human question mark'?"

"Gibbs is naturally nervous," explained Wainwright. "He's not so old at this game as you and I, Horrikan, and we must make allowance."

"Nervous?" he repeated the boss. "I should say he's just looking at the clock as if it was a sausage. That's no way to treat fifty cowards, man! Here, try another, and see if you can't smoke it instead of eating a free lunch off it. Nothing like a good smoke to steady your nerves. If—"

The ante-chamber door opened, and Williams hurried in.

"Got Ellis!" he reported. "He's here and—"

"You're sure Ellis and Roberts will show up?"

"Yes."

"In good time?"

"But suppose they don't?" insisted Gibbs nervously. "What then?"

"Why, if they don't then they won't. What do you suppose?" snapped Horrikan. "What's the matter with you, anyhow? Are you looking for a museum case for the 'human question mark'?"

"Gibbs is naturally nervous," explained Wainwright. "He's not so old at this game as you and I, Horrikan, and we must make allowance."

"Nervous?" he repeated the boss. "I should say he's just looking at the clock as if it was a sausage. That's no way to treat fifty cowards, man! Here, try another, and see if you can't smoke it instead of eating a free lunch off it. Nothing like a good smoke to steady your nerves. If—"

The ante-chamber door opened, and Williams hurried in.

"Got Ellis!" he reported. "He's here and—"

"You're right!"

"Good!" assented Horrikan. "I thought he'd come to time. Now, for Roberts and the thing's done."

"The gallery in there is jammed," reported Williams, jerking his head toward the ante-chamber. "I never saw such a mob in the place before."

"That's what comes of all this newspaper publicity," growled Horrikan. "If it wasn't for the papers the people I never make any trouble for us. But they read the news and then they get their ideas of the matter wrong. I don't of them come here to see they don't get swindled. Lord! If the papers would only suspend publication for one week, I'd guarantee the people I'd state in my next pocket. They're always butting in to spoil the organization's honest profits. How are the majority in the galleries behaving?"

"They're quiet," answered Williams uneasily. "Too quiet. That's what bothers me. They seem to be waiting for the Mayor to rise."

"If they raise any row, rush a motion through to clear the galleries," ordered Horrikan.

"Nothing short of the police could clear away that big crowd."

"Then we'll have the police in to clear away that big crowd."

"But," argued Williams, "that would mean a riot, and a lot of people would get hurt. All the newspapers tomorrow would be full of it."

"Never mind that. Go ahead and do as you're told. At the first sign of disapproval from the galleries have the motion passed and turn the police loose. Understand?"

"All right," assented Williams dutifully and withdrew.

Wainwright opened his mouth to protest, but Horrikan was already busy at the telephone.

"Hello!" he called. "I want 500 P. 500 P. Yes—yes, I see the captain!" he went on a moment later. "Then send him to the phone. Tell him Mr. Horrikan is here, captain! For another pause. Yes, it's Horrikan. At city hall. In the aldermen's chamber there's a mob, and we're likely to need a police to quiet 'em. Yes. No. Of 'dict' them, you fool! 'Quiet' them! Yes. Send us a squad at double quick, and let the sergeant report to Williams. Let the boys bring their night sticks, and tell 'em they're to take no back talk and not to be afraid to slug if it comes to that, and I guess it will. Pick out the right sort to send. Yes. Of course I'll back up anything they do. Sure. Rush 'em. Goodbye."

The Late Employee.
The boss looked at the applicant. And asked, "Where did you work?"

"I worked for you, sir," answered the applicant. "And I'm a little bit of a workaholic."

He got the job, was late each day. The boss was mad. "You're a little bit of a workaholic," he said. "You may have been late with Blank & Blank."

"But you can't be late with me," said the applicant. "I'm a little bit of a workaholic."

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Lesson VIII.—Third Quarter,
For Aug. 22, 1909.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Acts xii, 22-41.
Memory Verses, 24-26. Text, II Cor. xii, 8-10. Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

(Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.)

It was Paul's thought, if it could prove to be the will of God, to visit the places in Europe where he had been on his previous tour and then return to Jerusalem, hoping at some time to see Rome also. Meantime he sent Timothy and Erastus, two of his ministers, into Macedonia, while he tarried in Asia for a season (verses 21, 22). Remembering what we wrote in the last lesson of the little that is said of some disciples, we might easily forget that Timothy was one of the company were it not for an occasional reference to him. This is our first introduction to Erastus, of whom we read elsewhere in Rom. vi, 23; II Tim. iv, 20. It may not seem like saying much for them to say that they ministered unto Paul, but for some years time it was all that could be said of Elissa with regard to Elijah. "He ministered unto him for six years, and in doing this he was truly ministered to the Lord as those who ministered to Him personally when He was here on earth" (Matt. xii, 42). It is impossible to minister to the Lord sincerely without exciting the enmity of him who ever dared to call the Lord Jesus to witness for him. Sunday, with its serious results. The fire broke out in the Coal Creek district, starting in the Anderson's saloon, and spread to the fire began at 6 p.m., and soon spread to the adjacent buildings.

"At nine o'clock the fire was under control. The loss is estimated at from $100,000 to $150,000. The buildings destroyed were the Minary's club, the Trill-Wood store and miners dwellings."

Parliament Will Meet in November
Ottawa.—If the present expectations of the government are realized, parliament will be called to meet on Thursday, November 4. It is possible that unforeseen contingencies may delay the opening until a week or even two weeks later, but the event is bound to occur by November 11. The estimates are being prepared by the various departments so they may be ready by November 1. The speech from the throne will contain an announcement regarding Canada's share in the naval league.

Serious Fire at Coal Creek
Fernie.—Fernie was visited by another serious fire on Sunday, with serious results. The fire broke out in the Coal Creek district, starting in the Anderson's saloon, and spread to the fire began at 6 p.m., and soon spread to the adjacent buildings.

"At nine o'clock the fire was under control. The loss is estimated at from $100,000 to $150,000. The buildings destroyed were the Minary's club, the Trill-Wood store and miners dwellings."

Fire at Didsbury

About 11 p. m. on Friday night last those of our residents who had retired for the night were awakened by a loud clanging of bells and repeated cries of fire. A few of our young men ran down the fire hall and got out the chemical engines, and ran them to the scene of the fire, which was northwest of town. Upon arrival, however, it was found that it was only a straw pile that had ignited. The lads with the first engine were not to be balked of their prey however, so promptly began playing upon the flames, which were quickly got under.

There is a general impression that the alarm was given purposely to see how quick the engines were on the spot. The first alarm was given at 11 o'clock and the first engine was at the scene of the fire at 10 minutes past eleven. The fire was nearly half a mile from the fire hall.

The alarm caused much excitement until it was known that no property was in danger of being burned. The scene of the fire being out of the way of main roads, and the night being dark, caused many an onlooker a tumble with the result of a few bruises in the morning.

Remanded For Trial

Alix Free Press: R. O. Bruce, of Lamerton, who was last week arrested near Winnipeg charged with forgery, was brought back to Stettler by Corp. Martin, Monday evening. A number of witnesses had been called to appear against him, amongst them being J. R. Mackie and C. M. Yarwood of Alix but upon arriving at Stettler, Bruce admitted his guilt, thus obviating the necessity of a preliminary hearing. He was remanded for trial at the regular sitting of the Court at Red Deer and on Wednesday was taken to Fort Saskatchewan to await trial.

Stray Shots

(By MARKSMAN)

What about that sports day. Do we get any this year or have we to take a soc train ride to a neighboring town.

Fish stories seem to be rather scarce this year, though the anglers are plentiful. That "wopper" surely isn't caught yet.

Over heard conversation in the hotel waiting room. "We'll soon be cutting wheat and oats, and what I mean we've got the crop."

Lacombe is now without electric street lighting. "Shine on Harvest Moon" should be a popular song there this season.

When there is a fire boys don't rush to the scene of the conflagration, but go to the fire hall and give a hand with the engines. On Friday night there were lots up to the fire but only four to draw the second engine.

Conversation on main street. "It's all very well to have these fire alarms and no doubt it does some good, but why on earth was it left till eleven, when it was dark soon after nine. It's not so very nice to have to get out of bed and run away to a fake fire away back of town, and risking breaking your limbs, to say nothing of the effect produced on ladies nerves."

Once upon a time there was a boy who looked after his fathers sheep, in a country where there were a lot of wolves. The boy would very often cry out "Wulf, Wulf" for fun, and bring out his neighbors to beat the wolf off. When the men got there the boy would laugh at them. One day a big wolf did come along and the boy was very frightened and called out "Wulf, Wulf," but his neighbors had been tricked so often that they did not come to help with the result that the wolf killed some of the sheep. Fire alarmists, find the moral.

Alberta's Big Convention

"Tell them it will be the biggest and best ever." This is the message from H. F. Kenny, General Secretary of the Alberta Sunday School Association, regarding the great Denominational and Interdenominational Convention that is to meet in Edmonton, Oct. 27—29, next.

There will be Bibles for Pastors, Superior teachers, Intermediate, Adult and Primary teachers, Secretaries and Librarians. There will be a couple of luncheons and conferences combined. In short, there will be a feast of inspiration and instruction for everyone. The various denominations will have gatherings when they will discuss their denominational literature, distinctive teaching etc.

The people of Edmonton and Strathcona will very kindly entertain on the Harvard plan (bed and breakfast free.) As a large number have already declared their intention to be there, it is practically certain that single fare for the round trip will be obtained on the railroads.

Any Sunday School that fails to send representatives to this great gathering will lose materially thereby. A line to H. F. Kenny, Box 566 Calgary will bring full information.

Sixteen Ways of Fighting Consumption

The great International Tuberculosis Congress, recently held in Washington City, has quickened interest in all plans for fighting this great scourge of the human race. It seems fitting and timely therefore for us to reprint here with a prominent placard exhibited at congress telling "How Tuberculosis is Prevented." On this placard sixteen ways were named as follows:

1. By preventing the infection well people, through germs in consumptive's spit.
2. By teaching the consumptive to destroy his spit.
3. By providing light and ventilation in the homes of the people.
4. By teaching people not to live or work in badly ventilated rooms.
5. By securing adequate ventilation and proper sanitary conditions in factories, stores, schools, theatres, and other places of public assemblage.
6. By abolishing dry sweeping of the streets and compelling the use of water.
7. By abolishing the use of feather lusters.
8. By abolishing sweat-chop made clothing.
9. By exterminating the common house-fly.
10. By teaching the consumptive how not to infect his family or neighbors.
11. By removing advanced cases free from infection, from tenement homes to hospitals.
12. By discovering the disease in its early stages and curing the patient, thus removing a source of infection to others.
13. By educating the community to the nature of the disease, that it is preventable, curable, and communicable.
14. By educating people to keep their physical condition in such shape as to enable them to resist the germ.
15. By advocating fresh air, out-door life, sunshine, rest, no over-work, wholesome food, temperate habits.
16. By protecting the milk supply, thus preventing infection from cattle.

Italians in Trouble

On Saturday two Italians who had been employed on a C.P.R. extra gang at Airdrie were given a preliminary hearing on a charge of intimidation, and were remanded until Monday. The two men are Antonio Matranga and Mike Salvatore, and they were arrested by Sergt. J. J. Wilson of the Mounted Police, after they had threatened the lives of several of their countrymen.

According to the story told by the foreman of the gang, the men came from Montreal with about forty others a little over one month ago. On Friday the timekeeper saw that Matranga was not working so hard as he should, and he told him to "get a move on." Matranga replied with an oath, and when the foreman came along later and repeated the instructions of the timekeeper, he refused to listen to him and began swearing again. The foreman accordingly dismissed him, upon which Matranga seized a large stone and threatened to brain any of the rest of the gang who kept on work.

Another "Sunshine" Feature.

This is an entirely new idea, and will especially interest people who reside in natural gas districts. The gas ring takes the place of the lower Sunshine fire-pot, thus making it possible to burn gas in your furnace without inconvenience. Such is not possible in a furnace where the ordinary gas log is inserted; for, should the gas give out, a coal or wood fire could not be started until the gas pipes were disconnected.

To provide against sweating in the summer time, Sunshine Furnace is equipped with a nickel-plated steel radiator and dome. All bolts and rivets are nickel-plated, all rods copper-plated. This special treatment, besides meaning quicker and greater radiation from the radiator and dome than cold cast iron could possibly give, acts as protection for the bolts, rivets and rods from inroads of gas. When cast iron comes in contact with gas, the nickel-plated steel is covered with our special Anti-Rust treatment, which prevents the slightest possibility of rust commencing anywhere in Sunshine Furnace.

ing. The gang then threw in their lot with Matranga and threatened the foreman and timekeeper.

Finding that they could not be induced to go back to work, the foreman closed the cook cart, remarking that if they did not work they would not eat. This angered the Italians, and headed by Matranga and Salvatore, they rushed the cart. The Italian's used stones and made many threats to burn the cars, and the police were accordingly sent for. When they arrived the two leaders were arrested, but about 20 of their countrymen still refused to go back to work and came to Calgary with the prisoners.

The charges against the two Italians who appeared before superintendent Deane at the Mounted Police barracks Calgary, on Wednesday afternoon on charges of intimidation were dismissed.

WANT CANADIAN CATTLE.

Glasgow Butchers Would Like Them Put Out to Pasture.

Mr. A. M. Trotter, veterinary surgeon for the police department at the Moore Abattoir of Glasgow, Scotland, who has been on a short holiday trip to friends in Montreal, as well as in Toronto, Niagara Falls and other western Ontario points, left for home recently. Mr. Trotter, who from his official position should be an authority on the subject, just before sailing, gave his views to The Montreal Standard on the cattle embargo by which the cattle imported from Canada were placed in the quarantine station and examined by a veterinary surgeon appointed by the British Government, and must be slaughtered within a certain time, say about seven days. Mr. Trotter said that the general feeling was that the Canadian cattle ought to be allowed in to the country and placed for a few months on the grass, as they were then in a much better condition than the ones from the States.

"I may say," added Mr. Trotter, "that during the nine years that I have been charge of the meat inspection at Glasgow, I have had four hundred thousand cattle either from the States or the United Kingdom pass through my hands, and they were slaughtered under the supervision of myself or my assistants, and in no instance was there the slightest suspicion of contagious pleuro-pneumonia or any other disease."

"You think, then, that were the Canadian cattle put on the grass for a short time they would be in much better condition for the market?" Mr. Trotter was asked.

"For most certainly," he replied. "For thirteen years I have been coming to Glasgow to take up my official position, I was on the east coast feeding there much preferred receiving the cattle from Canadian sources to any other, and being more adapted and made ready for the market."

NOT ALL HE EXPECTED.

How the Pilot Here Disregarded the Conventions of Herism.

A couple of men prominently connected with St. Lawrence River navigation, were swapping yarns the other day, and one of them told an amusing story of a presentation competition at one of the annual meetings of the Richelieu & Ontario Navigation Co., a gold was presented to the pilot who had taken the steamer Montreal down the rapids. This immense vessel was built and equipped with the hull and machinery, without any superstructure, had to make the perilous trip to the mouth of the river. The age was made without any serious damage, though many times regarded it as almost impossible for a boat of that size. The directors of the company felt that some recognition should be given the pilot, and the acknowledgment took the form of a handsome gold watch.

The chronometer was handed to the daring and skillful helmsman with a few kind words of congratulation. He would conclude in his words, "I stood there in the midst of a general silence of expectation. Everyone sat waiting for this intrepid riverman to express in broken accents his undying devotion to the company. Perhaps he would conclude in his words, 'I only don't see my duty.'"

But did he say this? Did his voice grow husky with emotion, and tears fill his eyes? No. On the contrary, he stood there, cool as a cucumber, and gazed intently at the watch.

"A fine nice watch," he finally remarked in a meditative tone, "but I don't see what it can do."

America's Largest Crane.

The new and powerful floating crane for which the port of Montreal has been waiting for the past twelve months is now established and in operation. Her first test on this side of the Atlantic took place recently, and she passed it successfully.

Just opposite the Harbor Commissioners' office, a large lake launch destined for use on Lake Temiscoumiqui, was waiting to be hauled up on board a flat car to be conveyed to its destination. The crane was placed in position, the lifting apparatus attached and she hoisted the craft up and lowered it round and placed it gently in the required position. The operation was watched with interest by a large number of spectators. The test was directed by Mr. John Thomson, of the firm of Vickers, Sons & Maxim, the builders, while Mr. W. Cowie, the Harbor Commissioners' engineer, was also present.

The crane is now, therefore, open for the handling of all business that offers. She is the largest floating crane in the world, and the largest in the world, having a lifting capacity of 75 tons.

Task for Canadian Clubs.

Dominion Day should mean something more to Canadians than an opportunity to see a horse race. It should be something nationally distinctive about this holiday, something to set it up as an annual observance. In every centre of population there should be some specific and suitable now extended to frame a plan to win general approval in this regard, but in the chain of Canadian history there is a machinery which, properly and patriotically used, could be of great national value.—St. John Sun.

To The Mothers Of Pale Girls

A Case Showing How The Tonic Treatment Restores Lost Health.

Anemia is simply lack of blood. It is one of the most common and at the same time the most dangerous diseases with which growing girls suffer. It is common because the blood so often becomes impoverished during development, when girls are overworked, overeat and suffer from lack of exercise. It is dangerous because of its tendency to grow so stealthily worse, if not promptly checked, that it may run into consumption. Every growing girl should take an occasional tonic to ward off the insidiousness of its approach and in all the world there is no tonic that can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Every dose of this medicine helps to make new, rich blood, which promptly makes weak, pale, listless girls bright, rosy and strong. Miss A. M. Dugan, Lowell, Mass., says: "I believe I owe my life to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. My blood seemed to have turned to water. I was pale as a sheet. I suffered from headaches and floating specks seemed to be constantly before my eyes. My nerves were so oppressed my limbs began to swell, and it was feared that dropsy had set in. I was told to take cod liver oil, but to this time two doctors had attended me, but notwithstanding I kept growing worse. I was told to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and after taking a few boxes I was much improved. I felt on using the pills until I had taken eight boxes when my health was completely restored."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure cases like this because they go to the root of the trouble in the blood. That is why they cure rheumatism and indigestion, nervous headaches and racking neuralgia, and all those troubles which grow from weakness and women of mature years so often suffer in hopeless silence. If Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are given a fair trial they will not disappoint you. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

If allowed to roam over your house, those few innocent-looking house flies may cause a real tragedy any day, as they are known to be the principal agents for the spread of those deadly diseases, typhoid fever, diptheria and smallpox.

AGED INDIAN DIES.

Old "Indian Dave" died in his wigwam in Gifford Township a few days ago, where he had made his home for 60 years. He was sure he had passed his eightieth birthday. He was known to the oldest settlers in 1838, and was then claimed quite old.

He was claimed to be the son of Chitnap of the Chipewyan tribe, but was never recognized as such by his tribesmen. He was known as "Indian Dave," but was recorded as Dave Stecker as a citizen in 1880.

He spent the winter in his bark and hide hut manufacturing baskets and bows and arrows, and during the summer traveled about the resorts selling his wares. He is survived by one son, James.

Old Dave was liked by everybody and the citizens of Gifford Township arranged to give him a citizen's burial.

IMPORTING BUFFALOES.

Exciting Scenes Attended Transportation of New Herd.

Canada has now the largest, indeed only considerable, herd of buffaloes in the world, and the stirring and even dangerous work has accompanied the assembling of that herd. Except for one hundred head which have been at Banff, and which will now be transferred, the colony of buffaloes in Buffalo Park, Wainwright, Alta., has all been secured from the herd owned by Michael Pablo in Montana. Pablo's 600 or 700 buffaloes were the outgrowth of a small group of twenty purchased thirty years ago from Wabbling Coyote, a Flathead Indian, returning from a great buffalo hunt in southern Alberta, so that Canada now secures her own, with interest, on payment, of course, of a considerable sum in cash, ranging from $100 to $200.

Two years ago the first round-up of the Pablo herd commenced, the captives being taken to Elk Island Park, at Lamont, Alberta. The ground here was unsuitable for a large herd, and the Government secured a new park of 107,000 acres at Wainwright, on the Grand Trunk Pacific, 160 miles or so east of Edmonton. To this point 340 buffaloes were removed from Lamont in 1906. The herd was to be increased by 156 fresh from the latest round-up in Montana. Adventures and dangers, such as those from stampedes from deer, marauded almost every day of the round-up. The animals ran wild over the land, and the men who chased them to the valley of the Little River, then into a lane which was the only one left. There they then swam this and entered a large corral, from which they were driven into a small corral. When the round-up was finished, they were loaded into cages on wagons and hauled 55 miles to Wainwright, where they were put on a railway station on the Northern Pacific, and then entrained for Canada. Every now and again a young bull would stand on his hind legs, and when he was agitated, resulting in such incidents as the impaling of Johnny Lecker's horse, and the carrying of horse and rider on a buffalo's horn across the corral.

The Canadian Girl.

In the first instance, we must admit that the French Canadian girl has remained quite aloof from her more modern sisters, and is in many respects still a creature of the past. Long-faded described the dark-skinned, golden-haired, low-slung, and the French Canadian girl is a conservative, mother, who follows her great-grandmother's way, and is akin to the Norman maidens of long ago. She is, as a writer in The Girl's Realm, gentle, industrious, and a very devoted daughter of Mother Church, and usually gives herself up at a very early age to a young man, as fond as herself of the ways of their forefathers. In Quebec and the provinces along the Atlantic may be found many a Marie, Josephine, or Jacqueline, who might have given the New England puritan the most beautiful of her kind. To the British world, however, the Canadian girl belongs to the present, and she is willing to give exhaustive attention. In connection with her qualities it is almost impossible to avoid international comparisons, for the visitor from the United States finds points of divergence. While the English girl is likely to pronounce the Canadian girl very American.

Travels Far Into The North.

Miss Anna S. Nash, of Carstairs, Alberta, will travel over a thousand miles straight north to Edmonton before she reaches Hay River, a Hudson Bay post, where she will visit Rev. Alfred J. Dale, an English Church missionary, formerly of Berlin, Ont., and a graduate of Wycliffe College, Toronto, in 1902. The trip will take in the neighborhood of two months to complete, and will be made by rail, stage, snow and river steamer. It is a trip scarcely ever made by a woman, and one that few men except traders take.

Miss Nash is accompanied by Archdeacon Lucas and wife of London, England, who are in Canada for a year's holiday. The archdeacon is going north to perform the marriage ceremony, and will probably spend the winter in the district with his wife, returning to London in the spring of 1910.

Miss Nash has had a wide and varied experience in the five or six years that she has been a trained nurse. Her early home was in Berlin, Ont.

Badly Hurt In Thresher

BLOOD POISON SET IN

Healed in one place, broke out in another—Cure effected by DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

Truth is often stranger than fiction and many of the cures brought about by Dr. Chase's Ointment are more like miracles than anything else. You generally hear of this great ointment as a cure for eczema or piles. In the case we report today the trouble was blood poisoning. You know how dreadfully dangerous this is. You know how helpless doctors are in its treatment. Read about this cure brought about by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mrs. C. Hopkins, St. George's, Ont., writes: "I feel like shouting the praises of Dr. Chase's Ointment. While threshing grain my son got badly hurt. One of the men who was pitching sheaves, missed the sheaf and ran the prongs of the fork into my son's leg. He did not take much notice of it and in a day or two it got sore and very itchy and blood poison set in. We did everything for it but it would heal one place and break out at another and kept on this way for three months."

"Finally I thought of Dr. Chase's Ointment and in a week's time we noticed a wonderful change. By the use of three boxes he was completely cured and the wounds healed up. There has not been a sign of a spot on him since."

"I might also state that my husband was cured of a very bad case of eczema by the use of three boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment. It was a railway station and he was unable to get to another and kept on this way for three months."

"I might also state that my husband was cured of a very bad case of eczema by the use of three boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment. It was a railway station and he was unable to get to another and kept on this way for three months."

Serious Accidents

Olds Gazette
Dan Grier, who has been teamster for Thos. Leeder for some time met with a serious accident a week ago last Thursday, by which he got his leg broken below the knee. Mr. Grier was driving one of the teams hauling a heavy load of lumber up a steep incline east of Airdrie. When about half way up the lead team quit, and, swinging to the side, caused the load to upset, as the hill was sliding as well as steep. As he had to jump to save himself from being crushed, he dropped into the upturned wheel, causing his injuries. The pole team kept the wagon from turning over, which if it had, the unfortunate man would have been instantly killed. Being about thirty miles from town. One can scarcely imagine what he had to endure before he received medical attention. Mr. Grier is now in the Calgary hospital, and grave fears are entertained by his attending physician of saving his leg.

A man who gives his name as Tom Davey, came into Olds on a freight train early Thursday morning in an intoxicated condition, and tried to secure liquor at the Victoria hotel, which was refused by the bartender. About eleven o'clock he fell off one of the box cars in the railway yard, and received an ugly gash in his head and it is probable that his skull is fractured. Dr. Little was sent for and the injured man was removed to the Alberta hotel, where he lies, up to the time of writing (Thursday evening) in a semi-conscious condition.

HURT BY A RUNAWAY ACCIDENT
Garfield Robinson, brother of G. N. Robinson, was injured in a run-away accident Wednesday evening. He was driving his brother's team hitched to a wagon from the nuisance grounds and when turning into Railway avenue east the team took fright at the sound of a switch a man had driving cattle and ran away. Mr. Robinson was seated on a barrel and lost his balance by the sudden start the team made so unexpectedly. He fell out breaking his left shoulder by the force of the fall on the front wheel. He also received a severe scalp wound by being struck with the hind wheel. He was unable to move from where he was injured until assistance arrived.

From all Parts

The engagement of Mr. William Whyte, Second Vice-President of the C. P. R., with the company has been extended for two years.

Florence Beckwith, an orphan 12 years of age, committed suicide at Elmira rather than undergo a fourth operation at the hospital.

The state of Alabama goes on the "dry" list this week. All hotels, saloons, breweries, and distilleries, must close as a consequence of the law just being put in force.

During the past few weeks the town has been having a series of what has been termed "Kickers Conventions." Kicks and kickers are alright in their place and serve a useful purpose at times. It has often been well said that a push is worth a hundred kicks, and that is what the town and district now needs—a united, whole hearted, energetic push by our own people.—Innisfail Province.

If an S and an I and an O and a U, With an X at the end spell Su, And an E and a Y and an E spell I, Pray what is a speller to do?
Then if also an S and an I and a G, And a H E D spell side, There's nothing much left for a speller to do
But go commit sin; you're signed!

Word had been received of the death of Harcourt Poole, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Poole of Central, on Wednesday last at Revelstoke, B.C. His body was found lying in a shallow stream near Vivian by some C.P.R. trainmen. The body when found had apparently been in the water but a short time. The Coroner attributed his death to heart failure. Deceased was 33 years of age, a veteran of the South African war, having served as a member of the celebrated Strathcona Horse, and was well known here, having resided with his parents here for several years before going to B.C.—Lacombe Advertiser.
